

GENERAL PHOTOGRAPHS

These photographs were found in a box of OBA memorabilia. The connection with the OBA is not always obvious. Little information is known about the places or when the photos were taken.

All of the pictures were different sizes and shapes. They have been scanned and reproduced here with the best available quality.

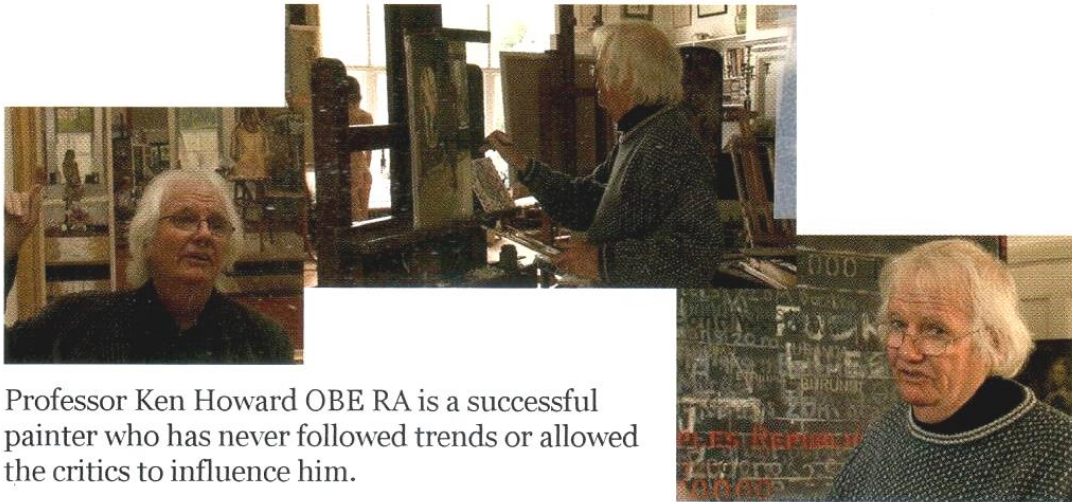

Professor Ken Howard OBE RA is a successful painter who has never followed trends or allowed the critics to influence him.

His art reflects the world the way he sees it and his considerable skill at depicting light has become his language. His paintings are on the walls of many public and private collections worldwide.

How does an artist who developed his style in the 1950s and refused to follow the changing fashions in painting over the succeeding decades manage to stay popular in 2011?

'The Way I See It' is the story of Ken's life and painting told in his own words. We hear about his time at art college, being a war artist in Northern Ireland and his career up to his most recent painting, 'Raw War', exhibited at the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition in 2010.

He gives a frank and honest appraisal of his life as one of the Royal Academy's most successful artists.

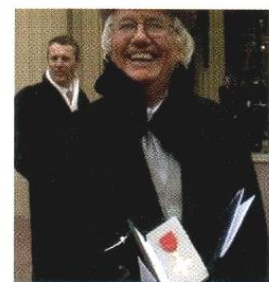

If you like Ken's work, you'll find it fascinating.

If you have never heard of him, you'll want to know more.
